from personal experience, informed by child development research, these two moms offer practical insights and appropriate guidance. Talking about tough topics may not be as hard as you think, and, more important, you'll see how these conversations can lead to meaningful discussions of God's unchanging goodness. "I love this book! I will recommend it again and again. It is street-level theology for children that drips with the gospel of Jesus Christ. read it, live with it, share it daily with your children, and not only will they learn and grow, you will, too."--Paul D. Tripp, president, Paul Tripp Ministries "This is a scripturally rooted and profoundly wise guide for parents who desire to weave gospel truths into the answers to their kids' toughest questions. I highly recommend this book. It takes the burden off of parents to have all the perfect answers, reveals the radical nature of God's grace, and weaves the 'scarlet thread of redemption' through every answer."--Jeannie Cunnion, MSW, author of Parenting the Wholehearted Child "These tough questions aren't random--children wonder about these issues, and they impact our everyday lives. Now talking about these questions doesn't have to be overwhelming for lack of resources. I'm so thankful for Elyse and Jessica's hard work, precision, and focus on Christ in this book."--Gloria Furman, author of Glimpses of Grace and Treasuring Christ With Your Hands Are Full "Martin Luther once said he measured his ability as a preacher by his ability to communicate the gospel to the young. This book is filled with such gospel truth, so simply articulated. No one has helped me connect the gospel to parenting more than Elyse Fitzpatrick and Jessica Thompson."--J. D. Greear, PhD, author of Ready to Learn and Jesus-Centered Parenting in a Child-Centered World and Stop Asking Jesus Into Your Heart "As a mother of seven, I've always been interested in grace-filled, Bible-based answers to the tough questions of this life. Elyse and Jessica do a great job of balancing truth with grace, while offering parents practical, solid answers to topics that many parents struggle with. I'll be looking at this great guide again and again, not because it contains all the answers, but because the authors point parents back to the only source of truth that's ever existed: the Bible."--Heidi St. John, author and speaker of The Ultimate Bible Fact and Quiz Book "A great book to help answer the big theological questions of little children."--Pastor Mark Driscoll "Elyse and Jessica have written a must-have book for parents and those involved with ministry to children. It provides helpful, grace-filled, and faithful answers to some of the most difficult questions children can ask about the Christian faith."--Justin Holcomb, Episcopal priest and seminary professor

According to these, empires will fall, the "Beast" will be destroyed and Christ will rule a new Jerusalem. Includes an introduction by Will Self. Reprint of the original, first published in 1867. This engrossing book traces the social history of Protestant Sunday schools from their origins in the 1790s--when they taught literacy to poor working children--to their consolidation in the 1870s, when they had become the primary source of new church members for the major Protestant denominations. Anne M. Boylan describes not only the schools themselves but also their place within a national landscape of evangelical institutions, their complementary relationship to local common schools, and their connection with the changing history of youth and women in the nineteenth century. Her book is a signal contribution to our understanding of American religious and social history, education history, women's history, and the history of childhood. From Christianity Today: "When I was a teenager, my youth minister threw a bible at my head for asking questions." Too often, for various reasons, people don't have the opportunity to ask the hard questions they have about faith, religion, salvation and the bible. And when questions are left unanswered in communities of faith, people either seek answers elsewhere or avoid the issue altogether. The purpose of the series is to collect the most compelling and challenging questions from a wide range of theological areas and pose them to a panel of "experts" who are challenged with responding in two hundred words in plain English. This volume addresses challenging or controversial questions about scripture collected from people on Facebook, MySpace, Twitter and other social networking media. Respondents include theology professors, clergy members, leaders, liberals, conservatives and voices representing a spectrum of views. The idea behind the books is not so much to provide definitive answers as it is to stimulate thought, reflection and discussion. By offering multiple perspectives, readers have the opportunity to arrive at their own questions. Better, they come to understand that questioning is not a taboo, but rather that it can be at the foundation of a strong and growing faith. The directive given to each respondent was to be concise and to speak in plain language, but also not to rely exclusively on "the Bible says it" justifications, or to wax abstract or overly intellectual. Instead, they write from personal experience as much as possible and provide real-life contexts that will allow the average seeker or churchgoer to apply such ideas to their daily lives. Bible Questions & Answers commonly-asked questions about Christianity and the Bible, including what is a tithe, how did Jesus Christ rise from the dead, and why did Christians suffer persecutions. Contrary to some common assumptions, Jesus is not the ultimate Answer Man, but more like the Great Questioner. In the Gospels Jesus asks many more questions than he answers. To be precise, Jesus asks 307 questions. He is asked 183 of which he only answers 3. Asking questions is central to Jesus' life and teachings. In fact, for every question he answers directly he asks—literally—a hundred. The Question considers the questions Jesus asks—what they tell us about Jesus and, more important, what our questions might say about what it means to follow Him. Through Jesus' questions, he modeled the struggle, the wondering, the thinking it through that helps us draw closer to God and better understand, not just the answer, but ourselves, and ultimately why questions are among Jesus' most profound gifts for a life of faith. A game-changer of a book. Reading Ham & Beemer's "Already Gone," author Dan Kreft realized that the Sunday school curriculum that he co-authored was failing to give his students the tools they needed to defend their faith outside of the four walls of church. Feeling convicted that he was part of the problem of two-thirds of youth deciding to abandon the faith before they reached high school, Kreft jettisoned his curriculum and started over again. From that point on, he focused on teaching his students how to give reasonable answers to reasonable questions and critiques of Christianity. He became keenly interested in getting parents involved, and to that end began to email a synopsis of each lesson to the students' parents on Monday night. These emails became the foundation upon which "'Jesus' Is Not the A

Every Sunday School Question" is based. In "Book 1: Foundations," Kreft tells the story of his journey as a Sunday school teacher, introduces the unusual class format in a sample letter to the parents, and then goes on to tackle following questions: Why should anyone believe the Bible? What and when was the beginning? Did God use the big bang?, and Why is the age of the earth is such a big deal? Kreft also discusses the problems with distant starlight, young- and old-earth proponents, and offers six reasons why the idea of millions of years is incompatible with Scripture. University apologist, director, and popular speaker Alex McFarland has spent the last two decades answering questions about Christian worldview and the Bible from children, teens, and parents. In The 21 Toughest Questions Your Kids Ask about Christianity, he summarizes questions today's children and teens are asking about God, the Bible, and the problem of evil. Alex's experiences have taught him that how adults answer questions about God is as important, if not more important than, what kids ask. He provides parents with teaching strategies that will help them reach their children intellectually and spiritually. Today's kids and teens are looking for authenticity, integrity, and straightforward truth. Alex comes alongside parents and gives them tools to effectively answer not only their children's toughest academic questions but also the questions that plague their hearts. While reading Ham & Beemer's "Already Gone," author Kreft realized that the Sunday school curriculum that he co-authored was failing to give his students the tools to defend their faith outside of the four walls of the church. Feeling convicted that he was part of the problem, Kreft jettisoned his curriculum and started over again. From that point on, he focused intently on teaching his students how to give reasonable answers to reasonable questions and critiques of Christianity. He also became keenly interested in getting parents involved, so that he began to email a synopsis of each lesson on Sunday to the students' parents on Monday night. These emails became the foundation upon which "Jesus' Is Not the Answer to Every Sunday School Question" is based. In "Book 2: Practical Apologetics," Kreft takes the principles learned in the first two volumes of his book ("Foundations," and "Is God?") and applies them to situations from everyday life: a YouTube video purporting to use math to disprove the age of Noah's day, a pair of Mormon missionaries at the door, and a months-long encounter with a Jehovah's Witness on a commuter bus after work. He also presents biblical answers to questions that come from our culture, such as "Why do I want me to be happy?" and "Was it possible for Jesus to have sinned during His temptation in the desert?" He also relates biblically-based answers to some questions that his students have asked over the years, for example "Is it possible for you to commit that would cause you to lose your salvation?" and "Why would God make Lucifer so appealing if he knew what Lucifer was eventually going to do?"
