This is a book for thinkers, students, teachers, and parents who love science and math in the form of activities only using common and basic items. For example you can measure the energy of the sun with a cup of water, a thermometer, and a watch. Each activity gives the purpose, the materials list, the procedure, the data tables, the formulae, and the conclusion to follow. One has to obtain the needed materials, if a student/child have permission and supervision, and a spirit of scientific curiosity to set forth on the adventure of science. All activities involve measurements and calculations to reach conclusions - which is the heart of the scientific method in practice. The range of activities spans most of physics, but looks at chemistry, astronomy, and several types of math too. The slide rule is encouraged ( and a paper template one is supplied ) to do the math with plenty of directions on its use and why it should be used to teach numeracy skills today. To take this quest one has to be the scientist, the researcher, the experimenter, the mathematician - in sum be the inquisitive pioneer. It discusses international measures to prepare for, respond to, and prevent oil pollution incidents, as well as the international legal framework and agencies with a role in pollution prevention and responses. It includes chapters on modeling the fate of oil pollution, oil spill response, and oil spill beaching probability, and presents data from a range of sources, including historic data on shipping accidents and oil exploration and exploitation activities, satellite and remote sensing data, and numerical modelling data, to provide an overview of oil pollution over several years. Topics covered include modelling of oil slicks in the eastern and western Mediterranean basins, oil exploration and exploitation activities in the waters of the Levantine Basin (Eastern Mediterranean), and signatures to and ratification of the Barcelona Convention and its Protocols, for example. Together with the companion volume Oil Pollution in the Mediterranean Sea: Part II - National Case Studies, it addresses both national and international measures in the region, making it of relevance to the agencies and government bodies tasked with remediating or preventing oil Parathyroid hormone PTH (1-34)'s ability to increase bone formation has made it therapeutically beneficial, but its impact on bone resorption and chance of osteosarcoma limits its usefulness. In mice, bovine PTH (7-34) induces bone formation without bone resorption, suggesting its usefulness in osteoporosis. However, PTH (7-34)'s impact on bone function must be comparable to or better than that produced by PTH (1-34) and its effect on bone in the presence of endogenous PTH has not been assessed. Using human Saos2 osteosarcoma cells, we examined the effects of PTH (1-34) and PTH (7-34), alone and in combination, on second messenger production, DNA synthesis, ERK and

Akt activation, activity of pro-apoptotic caspase 3, and changes in expression of selected genes. PTH (1-34) increased cAMP, a response competitively antagonized by PTH (7-34). PTH (7-34) alone reduced basal cAMP production, indicating it is an inverse agonist in these cells. PTH (1-34) also increased intracellular calcium. While PTH (7-34) had no effect alone, it enhanced the effect of PTH (1-34) on calcium at low doses. A 24 h treatment with PTH (1-34) increased cell number, while PTH (7-34) had no effect alone and blocked the responses to PTH (1-34). PTH (1-34) produced a rapid increase in ERK activity at 5 min while PTH (7-34) slowly increased ERK activity with a maximal response appearing between 30-60 min. However, ERK activation was lost when both peptides were present. While PTH (1-34) decreased Akt activity and PTH (7-34) had no effect, when both peptides were present together, Akt activity increased at low dose of PTH (1-34). In general, PTH (1-34) decreased expression of genes involved in osteoblast differentiation (Runx2, osteocalcin, and Col1A1) a response mimicked by PTH (7-34). Co-incubation with both peptides produced responses comparable to PTH (1-34) alone. PTH (1-34) stimulates pro-proliferative genes (p21cip1, BMP2) and increased RANKL/OPG ratio while PTH (7-34) did not. Taken together, these data suggest that PTH (7-34) may not be a suitable anabolic agent in vivo. This guide was developed to assist in the recruitment of new professionals to the field of special education and related services. The 34 suggested activities are based on the assumptions that planned, systematic recruitment at the local level is critical to attracting dedicated and talented individuals to the field; that career choices are often based on personal experiences; and that practicing professionals are the best recruiters of future professionals. The activities are organized into three sections. Section 1, "Increasing Visibility," includes activities aimed at heightening public awareness of special education and related services. These activities present the message that special education and the related professions are worthwhile, rewarding careers to consider. The second section, "Direct Recruitment Activities," offers actions and events that can be arranged to directly convey the message about these careers. Section 3, "Marketing the Profession," touches on marketing strategies and products that can showcase careers in special education and the related services professions. Appendices provide fact sheets showing relevant national statistics, a listing of relevant organizations and associations, a description of the National Clearinghouse for Professions in Special Education, a list of commonly asked questions about special education and related services, and sample presentation materials. (DB) Toothy grins, curly mustaches, pointy ears, and more for decorating the big fat Halloween pumpkin shown on the inside cover. Loads of year-round fun. A sourcebook of exercises, games, scenarios and role plays, this practical, user-friendly guide provides a complete and valuable resource for research methods tutors, teachers and lecturers. Developed to complement and enhance existing course materials, the 100 ready-to-use activities encourage innovative and engaging classroom practice in seven areas: finding and using sources of information planning a research project conducting research using and analyzing data disseminating results acting ethically developing deeper research skills. Each of the activities is divided into a section on tutor notes and student handouts. Tutor notes contain clear guidance about the purpose, level and type of activity, along with a range of discussion notes that signpost key issues and research insights. Important terms, related activities and further reading suggestions are also included. Not only does the A4 format make the student handouts easy to photocopy, they are also available to download and print directly from the book's
